

ABSTRACT

The present invention discloses a computer system for a vehicle. The computer system includes a processor having at least one supporting module connected to an automotive system of the vehicle. A display screen is connected to the processor for retrieving information data from the processor and selectively displaying information concerning the automotive system. The present invention further includes a means connected to the processor for controlling the functions of and operating the automotive system based upon the information displayed on said display screen.